CHINESE RISK CONCERNS ARE NOT PROVING PROSPEROUS

Under-Capitalisation Is One Difficult Handicap

"LEAKAGES" ALSO

Flood Insurance Not Common In This Country

BY DAVID ARAKIE

Chinese life insurance companies, though numerous, have not proven successful due to under-capitalisation, lack of experienced management and forms of "leakage" common in Chinese companies but vigilantly guarded against by American and English insurance laws governing investments, expense ratios, etc. Better results may be hoped for from Chinese life companies when they have had time to gain a clearer idea of the necessary safeguards which must be built into a life insurance undertaking. Also when they have learned to sell a policy on its merits as protection instead of as a face business.

It is curious that very few insurance organizations in China underwrite flood risks. For instance the floods that almost destroyed Swatow last summer resulted in heavy losses to many foreign homes, for their cargo was not insured against this calamity. Flood damage is a special marine policy, and it is quite likely that the issue of this is not considered safe by most insurance companies. There is no reason why it should not be inaugurated by some of our enterprising fire and marine insuring corporations.

TWO FORMS UNKNOWN

Flood and typhoon insurance is not known to the Chinese. Foreign firms can get these policies, but apparently they do not give it much thought. After the floods at Swatow, we understand, quite a crop of inquiries were received for this class of risk, but the amount of business booked seems to have been very trifling. It was stated at the time that an enormous number of lives were lost, but the loss to property has not been estimated even up till the present time. The actual damage done by typhoon to property apparently was not serious when compared with the loss of lives.

There has been a marked decline in the number of serious conflagrations in China in recent months. The only large one was in Hangchow, involving a large piece goods store. The insurance involved is $15,000. The second important one was in Chekiang, the insurance companies being concerned to the extent of $15,000. Hankow and Tientsin report moderate outbreaks, and the last two months can be considered a very normal period for fire losses. The only recent marine loss of importance was in connection with the steamer Wanli. It is reported that the Chinese insurance companies and insured the hull. Quite a number of foreign companies have suffered by the sinking of this vessel.

BOYCOTT FELT

The local Japanese hongs and shipping companies are feeling acutely the effects of the boycott initiated against Japanese goods by the Chinese. Japanese boats plying on the coast are carrying very little cargo. Vessels that are accustomed to obtaining a thousand tons on each trip are not securing even two hundred tons. Space cannot be filled, and how long this state of affairs has to be tolerated by our Japanese friends is not known. Chinese shippers have all decided not to offer cargo to Japanese steamship companies, and the loss of this trade to organizations like the Nishin Kisen Kaisha and others is serious. If it were not for the foreign merchandise that these companies are able to pick up at Hankow and other points on the Yangtze, the Japanese vessels on the river could not be operated at the present juncture.

What is "market value"? This question, although it may to an ordinary layman appear very

Rigging Of British And French Vessels Carried Away

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, June 11.—Treasury officials after a hurried conference have refused the request of the French Embassy for a relaxation of the prohibition regulations in the case of the liner, France, at present in New York, which sailed from France prior to June 10, when the regulations became effective.

(French Wireless)

Paris, June 11.—Havas news agency announces that on the arrival in New York on June 10, of three steamers, especially on the transatlantic liner France the Customs officials set seals on the cases containing spirituous liquors and the crew of the "France" were unable to get their daily ration of wine.

"PREFERENCE" IS MAIN ISSUE IN BUDGET DEBATE

Resolution Authorises Establishment Of Debt Sinking Fund

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 11.—In the debate on the Budget in the House of Commons today a resolution was adopted authorising the establishment of a debt sinking fund of £40,000,000 for the current year, £45,000,000 for next year, and thereafter £50,000,000 annually.

The question of Imperial preference came up when Mr. Bonwick, Liberal Member for Chippenham, moved the abolition of the Imperial preferences contained in the 1919 Budget.

Mr. Bonwick dwelt on the preference in regard to tea, which, he asserted, was not only costing more than the original estimate but the consumer was paying substantially the same price as before.

Mr. A. Barnes, Labor Member for East Ham, who is President of the London Co-operative Society, asserted that the tea preference was opposed by the trade here and gave no advantage to the Indian grower in foreign markets. Dr. Chapple, Liberal Member for Dumfriesshire, argued that the Dominions did not want any in-pot preference in order to maintain their loyalty.

Col. Gretton, Conservative Member for Burton, contended that the preference did not go far enough.

Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Parliamentary Secretary to the Department of Overseas Trade, enumerated the increased exports from the Empire of various commodities since the preference was adopted. He denied the assertion that Indian tea-growers did not want preference.

The amendment was rejected by 255 votes to 150.

Mr. Thomas Johnston, Labor Member for Sirling and Clackmannan, moved an amendment to abolish the tea duty.

Sir William Joynson-Hicks declined to agree to the abandonment of the tax, which yielded £11,000,000 a year.

A further Labor amendment aimed at halving the present tax. Both amendments were rejected by substantial majorities.

A clause continuing the tea duty was adopted by 239 votes to 160.

Kumsang Skipper Exonerated By Court Of Inquiry

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, June 12.—At the Court of Inquiry into the stranding of the steamer, Kumsang, witnesses attributed the stranding to the extraordinary set of the sea, which could not be foreseen.

The Court found that all reasonable and seamanlike precautions had been observed in connection with the navigation of the ship and that the stranding was due to an abnormal current, probably caused by a small depression situated to the westward. No warning had been given by wireless to the Kumsang of this storm. The Captain was exonerated from all blame.

Community Church Gets Half The Amount Sought In Building Campaign

Tael 33,000 Already In Hand Is Report Made To Tiffin Meeting At Parisien Yesterday; Expect Fund From States

The Community Church campaign headquarters reports that one-half the total sum has been secured. At the time held at the Hotel Parisien yesterday noon the various teams reported a total of Tls. 33,000 already in hand.

The team captained by Dr. Anne Walter Fearn was in the lead as it was also the day before. Mr. Ray Christy's team stood second.

Mr. Christy reported a subscription of Tls. 100 from Captain Bigelow, one of the skipper employed by the Standard Oil Company. Captain Bigelow said, "I do not go to church often, but this is an American institution and you are on me. I am going out and try to raise more."

I expect to get a bonus. If the trip is successful and I capture the bonus the church shall have half of it beside the Tls. 100 which I hereby subscribe."

GARAGE LENDS CAR

The Auto Palace has contributed the use of a car to Mrs. Lavers and her team as part of their contribution to the campaign.

The final rally of the campaign will be a dinner at the Hotel Parisien at seven o'clock Thursday night, when all members and friends of the Community Church are invited to attend. The dinner will be free to the members of the teams, for others the rate will be $1.50 per plate. It is hoped that a large number of the members and friends will attend. All those who can be present are invited to notify campaign headquarters by calling Central 457.

At the tiffin yesterday it was discovered that Mrs. Schoenfeld and Mrs. Connell, who are working together on Mr. Fearn's team, had called on forty-three people during the last twenty-four hours. They received subscriptions from twenty-three of these persons.

Subscriptions are being received from many people who are not identified with the church. They say the Western District needs a church. They also believe that it will be a fine thing to have an American Church opposite the American School. Free education and free religion have done much to make America what it is, and many feel that the American boys and girls in Shanghai should have the benefit of a Protestant Church. Most modern Americans are also pleased to know that it is a Union Church, one in which denominationalism is not stressed.

AMERICAN AID EXPECTED
The Rev. Clifford Drury, the pastor, is acting as executive secretary of the campaign committee, and is working strenuously to make the campaign a complete success. He expects soon to hear good reports from the campaign which is also proceeding in America. It is probable that several thousand gold dollars will be received by cable before the campaign closes at 7 p.m. on June 14.

SPECIAL TRAIN WILL BRING PRISONERS TO CITY THIS EVENING

Foreigners Freed After Thirty-Six Days Of Captivity And Were Due To Leave Tsaochuang Early This Morning; All Are In Good Health; Messages Received Here Leave Doubts As To Fate Of Chinese Prisoners

By Lloyd ("Larry") Lehrbas
(China Press Staff Correspondent)

Tsaochuang, June 12.—All prisoners released six o'clock tonight.

BY JUNIUS B. WOOD

(Staff Correspondent Chicago Daily News)

Tsaochuang, June 12.—Foreigners released.

In addition to the foregoing messages received in Shanghai last night there were others of a private nature, directed to friends and relatives of the captives. One of these, sent to the mother of one of the prisoners, stated that the captives would arrive in Shanghai at 10:30 tonight. Needless to say there will be a crowd at the Shanghai North station to meet them if this report is confirmed during the day.

It is unfortunate that wire service to Tsaochuang is so congested, as the correspondents there undoubtedly filed amplifications of their "flashes" last night, but none got through. There can be no doubt, however, about the prisoners being free, as the news came through from numerous sources. The American consulate here received an official notification from American Consul Davis at Tsaochuang, that the men had been set free at 6 o'clock, and that they were at that time on their way to the relief station.

London, June 12.—The Morning Post has begun a series of articles in the new problems of the Far East, resulting from the Great War and the Washington Agreement and the desire of Japan for Empire expansion, written by a special correspondent who has returned from a prolonged tour of Japan, China, Singapore and the Pacific.

The writer expresses the opinion that Japan will turn to the "China power-house" as a field of exploitation. He says that China, in spite of her large population, is able to absorb a considerable number of Japanese immigrants, while much of the surplus population of Japan, at present almost without work, could be profitably employed within the Japanese Empire on industries fed by China's raw material.

The correspondent draws attention to the remarkable progress Japan has already made throughout China, particularly her advance in the Yangtze Valley, formerly a British sphere of influence. He thinks that Japan cannot be blamed for seizing the many opportunities afforded her for developing her economic interests in China.

In conclusion, the writer says that, if Western nations do not take combined action in restoring China's fallen fortunes, they will be opening the door to Oriental action, which is far more likely to achieve this result.

Paris, June 11.—The heads of the Allied delegations at Lausanne met the Turkish delegates this afternoon to continue the discussion on the confirmation of families of foreign diplomatic and consular services.

General uneasiness in this regard is felt by foreigners in the city, and it is expected that the soldiers, who are five months pay in arrears, will instigate trouble using either anti-Japanese feeling, or their friends, the bandits, as an excuse.

N. Y. K. Cuts Fares To Foreign Officials

POINCARÉ NOW WANTS LIES TO REPLY TO BERLIN

Wants Cession Of Passive Resistance As Preliminary

(Reuter's Service)
London, June 11.—The Cabinet today discussed the German memorandum and also the French views, which are understood to have been communicated by the French Ambassador in London. Reuters Agency learns from a well-informed source that the French Premier, M. Poincaré, is anxious that the Allies, including Britain, should immediately send a Note to Germany demanding the cessation of passive resistance in the Ruhr.

It is understood that M. Poincaré considers this a preliminary to Allied discussion of reparations. On the other hand, the British Government apparently considers that such discussion must come first.

It is reported that the French are still detaining over 100 people.

(Reuter's Service)

Brussels, June 11.—The Independent Belge reports that five persons fired revolvers at a Belgian sentry guarding the approaches to the Gemmenel tunnel, on the Aix-la-Chapelle-Tongres Railway. The sentry was not hit and returned the fire, whereupon his assailants decamped.

General Gomes Da Costa To Review Corps Today

General Sir Gomes da Costa, leader of the Portuguese expeditionary forces during the war, will review the Shanghai Volunteer Corps at the Race Course this evening at 6.10 o'clock.

Yesterday afternoon General da Costa went to the Rifle Range, where he reviewed the Portuguese Company, S.V.C., which went through various evolutions. A full muster of the company was on hand, earning the commendation of the General.

Last evening a largely attended and highly successful ball was given by the members of the Club Lusitano di Shanghai, over 200 attending. Daughter Testifies In Attempted Murder Trial

Testimony of the daughter of the accused was the principal feature yesterday in the continued hearings of the Police Court case in which Mrs. Judith Rowarth, 63 years old, is charged with the attempted murder of Bakker Singh, Indian money lender, found brutally hacked and almost dead in a lonesome spot off Ward Road on the morning of May 5.

The daughter, Mrs. Margaret Warwick Davis, admitted that she owed the Indian $700, on which she was paying interest, but gave evidence tending to substantiate the mother's claim that she could not have been in the neighborhood of the crime at the time it happened. After the first half hour had been consumed with reading of evidence taken Monday and the signing of the deposition book by the witnesses, Mrs. Margaret Davis was called to the stand to testify in her mother's defense.

In the testimony of the accused woman, Monday, she stated that she had visited Mrs. Davis in the afternoon of May 4, the date on which the Indian money lender victim alleged he had been hacked with a cleaver and left for dead in the open fields.

Mrs. Davis said that Det. Inspector Quayle called at the house on May 6 while the household was at dinner. He said he came with an open warrant for her Cantonese amah.

What was the result of the visit? Inspector Quayle asked me if I had any female servants. I said that I had one. A Cantonese amah had been working and she had left me about a fortnight ago. She is about 14 to 16 years old.

By Mr. Maitland: You owe Bakker Singh $700? Yes. It is a large sum. My husband is working. He does not know anything about this affair.

How much does your husband earn a month? Taels 300. It would be about $420. You owe Bakker Singh two months' of your husband's salary? Yes.

The witness added that she had no money of her own and the only change she had of paying Bakker Singh was with money given to her by her husband. She was paying 10 percent interest per month. The husband gave her all his wages.

When Mr. Quayle came to the house he said "I want to see your amah?"—Yes.

And you said that she had left your service a fortnight before?—Yes, I might have said that.

And you added that she was pock-marked and young?—Yes.

The witness said that she had failed to find the amah. Mrs. Rowarth knew the little Cantonese girl and knew that she had left a fortnight before.

After some further testimony the case was adjourned until this afternoon.

INDIAN CUSTOMS IN AMERICA TOLD IN LECTURE HERE

A lecture of much interest was given last night by Mrs. Helen Fitzgerald of New York, at the Royal Asiatic Society Hall. The subject was "Indian Customs in America," which was most successful, and was under the auspices of the Shanghai Society of the Theosophical Society. Nearly one hundred people were present. Slides were used to illustrate the lecture.

Mrs. Fitzgerald is a well-known American writer and lecturer, and for the past two years she has been making a world tour, lecturing in England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Holland, Switzerland and Italy. She has been enthusiastically received everywhere and she is now on her way back to the United States.

The subject of Mrs. Fitzgerald's lecture was "Myths, Dances and Ceremonies of the Blackfoot Indians." She described her first visit to the Blackfoot in their marvelous land of great peaks, jewel bright lakes and glaciers. Speaking of the Indian country, she said:

"You cannot separate the Indian from his environment. His Sacred Book is the Great Book of Nature. For him every peak, every pass and every lake has its myth and tradition."

She then told some of the most beautiful and sacred of the Blackfoot myths, that of the god of the dawn and the winds, of the creation and of the fairy folk of lake and forest.

Mrs. Fitzgerald described her meeting with E. Ma-ta-quah, the Great Head Chief of the tribe who was in reality a King. He took her into his lodge, oriental in its richness, and after smoking with her the sacred pipe of peace told her the ancient myth of Scarface and the history of the Sun Dance Ceremony, of the Building of the Medicine Lodge, a ritual of great spiritual significance. The lecturer witnessed the ceremonial and was permitted to take part in them. At the invitation of the Great Head Chief, she was taken into the tribe and with solemn ceremony adopted by her chosen people before the Sun Altar. In the Temple of the Sun. She was given the name of Muchanahla which means the "Victory."

She was permitted to take pictures of the Sun Altar and the Sun priests in the act of making their sacred invocations. These pictures were shown on the screen.

Mrs. Fitzgerald told of her life in the Rocky Mountains and of the unselfish loyalty and friendship of her Indian friends. "Were I alone and in want tomorrow," the lecturer said, "I could return to my Indians knowing that every tip would be open to me and that on every lip would ring the welcome, 'Oki Muchanahla!'"

The dances of the Indians, expressing every motion and aspiration were described by Mrs. Fitzgerald with great vividness. She said:

"Among the Indians, rhythm expresses itself simultaneously in motion, in sound and in words as the wind sets in motion the branches of the trees, evoking from them spontaneous music, or the waves of the sea in their ebb and flow express at once the rhythm of motion and sound."

Speaking of Indian poetry Mrs. Fitzgerald quoted a modern critic, who wrote:

"Let me seize this opportunity for saying a word about the poetry of primitive men. We can hardly emphasize too strongly the fact—that which many people are quite blind—that but for our slender inheritance traditionally, and our still more slender inheritance emotionally of the mood of primeval humanity, all that is best in modern poetry would be lost." The lecturer added that the same applies to the dance.

She told the dramatic story of Heavy Breast, an old Indian who feeling that his hour had come, "went dancing to meet the Great Mystery." With his eyes fixed on the Sun, the spiritual ideal of his race the old man danced until he dropped dead. "What could be more glorious," the lecturer asked, "than to so live that we could go dancing to the Gates of the Unknown with our eyes fixed on the spiritual ideal of our race?"

The last picture was one of exceptional beauty, showing a sunset over the sacred mountains of the Blackfoot. Na-to-a-o-to-pa. Going-to-the-Sun, and the Great St. Mary's Lake. The lecturer explained that the rising and the setting of the sun are symbolical with the Indians. As the sun sets but to rise on a new day, so the body of man lies down in death but to awaken upon a more glorious life.

Mrs. Fitzgerald closed her lecture with a poem of her own, giving the Indian's idea of the Milky Way. It is as follows:

"The Milky Way is a long way and a far way, And the way that leads to Heaven. It is worn so white In the Arch of Night By the rhythmic beat of ghostly feet— Of tired feet—"

Long-Distance Perambulator Race In England

DANCE marathons seem to have America by the ears, but it remained for a Mrs. Edwards of London, to devise the unique marathon. In response to a challenge from her, five mothers, with live babies in their perambulators, engaged in a walking contest from London to Brighton, a distance of 52 miles. The race was opposed by physicians, who said incalculable harm might come to both mothers and babies, but the women made the tramp and seemed to suffer no evil effects. Mrs. Lilly Green, the mother pushing Perambulator No. 5, won the race in 12 hours and 20 minutes.

As they struggled towards the master's seat in the High Arch of Heaven.

"The Milky Way is a long way and a far way for the Souls that would be shriven. From Star to Star Where New Worlds are, The ceaseless tread of the myriad dead. Throbs overhead, Fill the last dim mote of sin is shed. As they climb the High Hill of Heaven."

They Say—

William C. Sproul, former Governor of Pennsylvania—"I believe in warm-blooded philanthropy. Let us do everything we can to make the lives of all our people more comfortable, to relieve the sick and ailing, to provide more recreation and more enjoyment, to improve the schools and better the roads. There are some hopelessly Utopian suggestions made in the name of humanitarian legislation, and they do much to damage the cause they affect to serve. The machinery of practical humanitarian work is right at hand. In the easy mouthing of political phrases what candidate for office would fail to say he was in favor of humanitarian legislation? It is for the citizens to take these professions at their face value and not decide whether this or that man would by training and instinct want these things done."

Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, wife of the newly elected United States Senator—"Most men amuse me very much. Of course, there are exceptions—my husband, for instance, I mean particularly the ones who have the falling of trying to make themselves so interesting to the women they meet. What a supreme effort they make! And they seem to think the way they can do this is to sit down and tell their victim what lovely eyes they have, and what gorge they go through all the old and worn-out mechanical expressions which they believe constitute civility. When men learn that the majority of women would rather talk about other things, they will learn the secret of making the ladies like them."

John Hays Hammond, Jr., radio engineer and inventor—"Too little attention has been paid so far to anti-aircraft offense. The theory should be offensive rather than defensive. In the next war—if we have one—properly developed artillery can greet aircraft with an aerial barrage which would be impenetrable. The United States must take warning, and not strive to save money on appropriations for scientific work at the expense of national safety. No war is in sight for us at least for ten or twelve years, but neither Congress nor anybody else can guarantee that we shall not have one. I believe peace time is the time, to prepare for war. I see no reason to believe that in course I love my work. That is necessary in order to perform well."

Professor Jean Leeman, Belgian author and linguist—"It is possible for any normal person to master several languages besides his own. A little daily application and he soon attains an inestimable cultural and practical asset. I consider nothing more worth while from an educational standpoint. Four years ago a girl of fourteen came to me at Louvain determined to master French. Today, at eighteen, she has a high-salaried position with a great export house. A young man who masters another language finds his business opportunities increase. Professional people are often handicapped by their lack of acquaintance with foreign languages. The person able to speak French can get along pretty well anywhere in the world."

Helen P. McCormick, pioneer woman prosecutor in America—"Every man or woman, who holds a public office that necessitates close contact with the human problem and its ramifications, must possess sympathy. Else he or she is only a machine—a legal machine and unable to meet the requirements of the situation. But sentimentality should be an absent quantity in this matter of the interpretation and administration of the penal law.

A mantle of mystery and a subtle air of the forbidden constitute the atmosphere, which Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen believe surrounds the office of the District Attorney. How different it is! The modern type of the well and efficiently administered prosecuting attorney's office is conducted like a big, busy law office, carefully planned, so as to afford the interests of its clients every protection that the law provides. The clients in the District Attorney's office are the people of the county."

Inquiring Lady—"How much milk does your cow give a day?" Truthful Boy—"Bout eight quarts." "And how much of that do you sell?" "Bout twelve quarts."

NEW SHIP LINE, STATES TO CHINA, BEING LAUNCHED

San Francisco, (by mail).—Establishment of the United States-China Steamship Company, Inc., is causing much speculation in local shipping circles. This company, according to reports received here, purports to inaugurate a service from New York to Havana, via the Panama Canal to Los Angeles and to China and Japan by way of Honolulu.

The new line is to maintain passenger and freight service. According to the reports, the vessels to be used in the new run are former United States army transports of the St. Mihiel type. These vessels are reported to have been fitted for the accommodation of about two hundred first-cabin passengers and 300 steerage. There will be seven vessels assigned to the run. The first sailing will be scheduled for early June of this year. News of the proposed line is said to have been guarded against any premature publicity.

The initial voyage will be made out of the port of New York. There is no present intention of the interested parties sending any steamers of the service to San Francisco.

UPTON SINCLAIR, OF 'JUNGLE' FAME, LANDS IN JAIL

Socialist Writer Gets Into Difficulty in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, June 11.—Upton Sinclair, radical socialist, pacifist and author, will appear in Police Court again Friday on a charge of conspiracy to commit a crime. After spending twenty-four hours in jail, following his arrest at San Pedro harbor recently when he attempted to address a group of L. W. W. strikers, Sinclair was released on bail.

Sinclair was one of four men whose names appeared on a blanket complaint issued upon the request of Chief of Police Oaks. His prison companions were his brother-in-law, Hunter Kimbrough, and Hugh Hardyman, a free lance author, and Prince Hopkins, a wealthy Santa Barbara man. The same charge was filed against all four.

The conspiracy charge accuses Sinclair and his three companions of exciting discontent and disturbing the peace by discussing, arguing, orating and debating certain thoughts and theories that were contemptuous of the Constitution of the State of California and calculated to cause hatred for the law. They were also charged with conspiring to create a riot and to blockade the streets of San Pedro.

Sinclair and his three companions pleaded not guilty to the blanket charge. They asked for a jury trial.

Sinclair, in an interview, declared Los Angeles was the most serious part of the United States he had ever heard of, "a city where the police authorities do everything they please in violation of the law." The police chief, he said, has established "material" law at the harbor, though he has no legal right to do so.

"Chief Oaks' position at San Pedro was that we had no right to speak," he said. "To say that, Chief Oaks denies the citizen his legal rights, means that he is running that district."

News covers one-fourth of the earth's surface, and if Bryan and Volstead have their way they'll soon cover the other three-fourths.

Have you ever run into someone on the street, and then dodged from side to side for half a minute, vainly endeavoring to pass, while the other person by some strange fatality, blocked your every move by trying to pass you in the same way?

Such was the experience of a young man the other day. He and a nice young lady had been going through this performance for several seconds when his unwitting vis-a-vis staggered him by saying:

"Well, hurry up! Which is it to be—a waltz or a two-step?"

simple, is perplexing many merchants. From time to time Chambers of Commerce and Courts of law have been asked to interpret the term "market value." There seems to be no universal interpretation. The Birmingham Chamber of Commerce has been vexed to find a solution, and after holding a convocation has suggested that the Customs Conference of the League of Nations should consider the possibility of all countries accepting as "market value" the "value of the goods at works." It would be a splendid idea if each country where Customs duties are levied on ad valorem basis, were to frame a valuation tariff for its imports in order to insure the equitable assessment of the Customs duties as between one importer and another. It has been suggested that the League of Nations should arrange to have a classified list of the commodities of commerce for use by all countries in the framing of their Customs tariff.

Freckled Movie Star Injured In Film Scene To Be Shown Here

Wesley Barry, the freckle-faced screen luminary, was injured and laid up for two days with a badly swollen ankle when his diminutive flivver passed over his left leg during the filming of his latest picture, "Rags to Riches," which will be shown at the Isis Theater, on Wednesday, June 20, when the American Association of China is sponsoring a benefit to raise money for destitute American civilians in Shanghai.

According to directorial instructions Barry was to show a burst of temperament when his flivver stalled during an uphill climb. Barry climbed out of the machine, and after tinkering with the engine, stepped around to the rear and began kicking it in an attempt to get it going. The brakes had been set so that the car would not move, but, unfortunately, the brakes slipped. Freckles, in his frantic efforts to get out of the way, tripped and fell backwards, and the rear wheel passed over his right leg, severely wrenching it and confining him to his bed for two days. Upon Barry's return to the studio he approached Harry Rapf, the producer, and said: "Say, if you want me to pull any more of those wild kickin' stunts yer better git me a double."

"Rags to Riches" is said to tell the story of an ambitious and adventurously young, eager to be a regular boy. In the cast are: Ruth Renick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker, Eulalie Jensen and other prominent players.

Fight Fans To See Hansen, Big Dane, In Action Friday

Fight fans are looking forward with a great deal of interest to the next boxing show at the Stadium Friday night, as the program this week calls for the appearance of two scrappers whom the local bugs are eager to see in action, Knute Hansen and Capt. Matty Smith, late of the Australian overseas forces.

Hansen is a heavyweight who comes here with quite a good record. The main difficulty that the promoters have faced since he arrived in town has been to find a suitable opponent for him, heavyweights being scarce in this man's town. On Friday, however, Billy Oliveros, the local football star, will give him a try out, and fight fans are eagerly awaiting this match in order that they may get a line on the ponderous Dane.

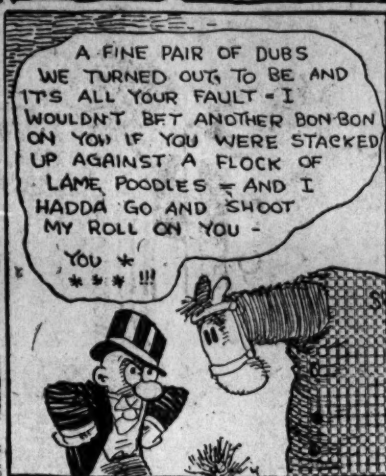

The big match of the week, however, will be the one between Capt. Smith and Chadwick, lightweight champion of China. The latter showed in his bout with White at the last show that he is a real scrapper, and as Smith comes here with the reputation of being one of the best men of his weight in Australia, where they produce a raft of good boxers, the set-to ought to be a thriller. It will be a fifteen round go, and there will be action galore from the first gong.

The prelims for Friday have not been announced as yet, but it is known that there will be at least four of these on the bill, some of them good ones, too.

Friday's show promises to be the best yet offered at the Stadium.

The annual Bisley meeting of the Scottish Company of the S.V.C. was held at the Rifle Range, on Saturday and Sunday, in dull weather. Throughout the two days shooting, the light was changeable, but the shooting was nevertheless good.

After luncheon, a cup presented by the President for members of the B.W.A., as well as ladies nominated by members of the Shanghai Scottish, was shot for from the 300 yards range.

Among those present in the afternoon were Mr. S. Barton, British Consul-General, and Colonel Gordon, C. M. G., D. S. O., the Commandant.

DISPUTE OVER SALUTE

London, May 11.—Replying in the House of Commons to a question with regard to the incident between an officer of the House Guards and a police constable who failed to salute the Royal Standard the Rt. Hon. W. C. Bridgeman said that all ranks of the Metropolitan Police were required to salute King's colors when displayed by troops on the march.

Sergeants and constables in uniform must salute commissions, officers of the Royal Navy, Army, Air Force or any of the auxiliary forces when in uniform, but men regulating traffic were not expected to salute unless spoken to. Orders revealing these instructions would be issued shortly.

He was a well-known humorist, and was crossing from America to England. In the smokeroom of the great liner a group of men would gather round him in hopes of pearls of wit dropping from his lips. They themselves told their last yarns in the hope of drawing him, but he was not to be caught.

At last the humorist propounded a riddle.

"What is the difference," he asked, "between me and a turkey?"

With anticipatory smiles they gave it up.

"Well," said the humorist, "they stuff a turkey with chestnuts 'after' he's dead—good night!"

And for some time nothing was heard save the "throb throb" of the propellers as they thrashed their way through the waters of the Atlantic.

Stage Manager (during rehearsal): "Where is Miss Fluffy? We can't possibly go on without the leading lady."

Stage Hand: "She sent word she'd be too busy to come today. She's going to write testimonials for shampoos and face powders."

Beauty Of Hague To Be Enhanced By Formation Of New Zuiderpark

The Hague, by mail.—(Special Correspondence)—The Municipal Council at The Hague has decided to lay out a new park in the southern part of the town. The Hague is extending rapidly in a southerly direction, a region which was chiefly meadow land and where trees are rare. The western sections of the city are situated in the immediate vicinity of the famous "Wood" and the Scheveningen "Boschjes."

This decision means that the southern quarters of the town will possess a park of almost the same proportions as the two others, mentioned above. The "Zuiderpark" will be about 250 acres, while the "Wood" is 275 acres, and the "Boschjes" five acres more. The cost involved is estimated at nearly $1,500,000.

The present plan when carried out will not only create a beautiful playground for a large number of citizens, but also, to a considerable extent, relieve unemployment. As the unemployed are receiving doles from the city, the creation of the park is being commenced at a very favorable moment, because considerable labor is required for digging ponds, planting and leveling. Thus the park will cost less than $1,500,000.

London Public Yawns And Bids Low At Sale Of Crime Relics

London.—Relics of famous and criminals no longer have the same fascination for the British man in the street as they did less than a generation ago.

The whole private collection of the late George R. Sims, journalist, author and playwright, was auctioned recently in London. Mr. Sims was more than thirty years getting his "Black Museum" together, and the whole of it, relics, news cuttings and books, was sold to an almost indifferent public in less than half an hour. One of the most treasured of all went for a few dollars apiece. Even things having a certain historical value, such as a set of rusty leg irons used on criminals in the eighteenth century, a massive lock from one of the cells in old Newgate prison, and a fragment of the beam from which condemned men were hanged, failed to interest buyers.

The only thing which fetched a price worthy of mention was a big collection of news cuttings relating to notable murders, trials and burglaries which took place between 1884 and 1915. Several journalists and amateur criminologists competed for these cuttings and the price eventually rose to more than $16, far and away the best of the sale.

Indian Loses Slander Suit Against Fellow Countryman

A case seemingly of "Much ado about nothing" was heard yesterday morning in the British Supreme Court before Judge Sir Skinner Turner and a jury when suit was brought by an Indian storekeeper against another Indian, named Buda Singh, to claim $500 as damages for an alleged slander.

The plaintiff, Har Charan Singh was represented by Mr. F. C. Faithfull, and the defendant by Mr. Eardley Maitland. The suit was tried before a special jury composed of Messrs. A. J. Stokes, F. Milner, I. A. Lewis, H. E. Middleton and C. Holdsworth.

When the jury were sworn, Mr. Faithfull made an application for an adjournment, submitting that there was every indication for an amicable settlement. The defendant, it was remarked, held a high position in the Sikh community and it would be best to adjourn the hearing so as to enable a compromise to be arrived at.

Mr. Maitland objected to this strenuously, and was willing to consent only if costs were granted. He argued that on the pleadings in the statement of claim there was no slander, and asked the Court to give a ruling on the question as to whether the words complained of were slanderous.

The Judge: I am not quite sure that I take your objection correctly. Do you want me to rule that the words alleged bear any innuendo and defamatory meaning? Is this the right time to make it?

Mr. Maitland: I am suggesting on the strength of this case that the words bear no defamatory meaning.

STATEMENT OF CLAIM.

Mr. Maitland continued to read the statement of claim which recited that on February 9, 1922 at the junction of Boone Road and Quinsan Garden the defendant maliciously and falsely spoke of the plaintiff to Sadhu Singh, and two others the following words: "It is Har Charan Singh Mera who is sending all this information to Captain Barrett through an Englishman" meaning that the plaintiff had given secret political information through the British Consulate to the Police, and was acting as traitor to his fellow Indians. The plaintiff alleged that in consequence of this statement he had been brought into contempt of his fellow-Indians especially in the Gurdwara, the Sikh Temple.

Mr. Faithfull said it was a wrong time to decide whether it was slander or not. The Judge would be best advised to hear the evidence.

The Court: It is for the Judge to say whether it can have a slanderous meaning. The case can proceed.

Addressing the jury, Mr. Faithfull said that the case should not be treated like an ordinary one, as it seemed to him that it was not governed by a case in the English law, for the simple reason that the parties were Indians. There was no doubt that there were many Indians in Shanghai who should not be here. Information had been given by certain persons from time to time about the conduct of certain Indians. That information when received had been passed on to Captain Barrett.

The Judge: Are you going to give any evidence in this case. The whole of that, I would think, would be privileged. Are you going to give any evidence of this?—No.

Then why are you putting it before the jury?—That leads up to the case.

IS MEANING DEFAMATORY?

The sole issue in this case is: Did the defendant say those words you say that you gave information about disloyal men.

The Judge to Mr. Faithfull: Where is the defamatory part about it? What is the harm of giving information to people about disloyal persons?

The plaintiff: I am charged with giving information about people as disloyal who are loyal. Mr. Faithfull: Your Lordship will see that it will do him harm when he is accused of giving information about loyal people.

The Judge: That would put an end to the C. I. D. These words are not actionable without proof of special damages.

Mr. Faithfull: We do not claim special damages.

The Judge: They are not actionable without special damages. As I understand the law of slander there are four classes of words which are actionable without proof of special damages. These damages must be proved. Under what of these four classes do you bring this action?

FIND FOR DEFENDANT

Mr. Faithfull: I do not bring it under any of the four classes. We bring the action under general slander.

The Judge: Will you give me your reference?—I have not them here.

You do not dispute that there are four classes of slander under which you can sue without proof of special damages. I want you to give me the reference to this.

Mr. Faithfull: There is no case. The Judge: I can give you the case where a lady was turned out of a religious community in consequence of slanderous words. It is not enough here to say: "I refer to the general law of slander." I want references.

In addressing the jury the Judge explained the law of scandal and expressed the opinion that the jury could not do anything but find in favor of the

VATICAN ETIQUETTE

Rome.—A curious detail of Vatican etiquette was revealed during the recent visit to Rome of Monsignor Seipel. As head of the Austrian Government, the Chancellor paid his first official visit to the King of Italy, at the Quirinal. The Pope would not concede him an audience in his ecclesiastical capacity until he had left Rome for a day or two and made a fresh return to the capital. The Monsignor Seipel's first visit was paid to Pius XI. He was accompanied to the Vatican by Baron Pastor, Austrian Minister to the Holy See. Monsignor Seipel's interview with the Pope dealt solely with church matters in Austria.

The Austrian Chancellor was visited at his hotel by Don Sturzo, the political Secretary of the Popular Party, who came to discuss the idea of an International Party composed of the Italian Popular Party and similar organizations in other countries.

Summing up his impressions of Italy, Monsignor Seipel said: "I have derived the distinct impression that Italy has every intention of keeping up amicable relations with Austria, while she is also disposed to help her in her work of reconstruction. I have been able to study the Italy of today at first hand, and I am convinced that this great nation is making every effort to reconstruct her provinces devastated by the war, to establish internal order, and to place her finances on a sound basis."

A PROPHECY

There is a mighty dawning on the earth
Of human glory; dreams unknown before
Will the mind's boundless world,
And wondrous birth

Is given to great thought; the deepdrawn lore,
That late a hidden fount, at which
A few

Quaffed and were glad, is now
A flowing river.
Which the parched nations may
Approach and view,

Kneel down and drink, or float
In it forever;
The bonds of Spirit are asunder
Broken

And matter makes a very
Sport of distance,
On every side appeals a silent
Token

Of what will be hereafter,
When Existence
Shall even become a pure and Equal thing

And Earth sweep high as Heaven,
On solemn wing.

Japan Businessman Asks Sino-Japanese Friendship

The importance of Sino-Japanese friendship is stressed in the following article written by Mr. Katsutaro Inabata, president of the Osaka Chamber of Commerce, for a special edition of the Osaka Mainichi which was published during the recent Far Eastern Games in Osaka. Mr. Inabata touches on the present anti-Japanese boycott in China.

"There is no doubt that the peace of the Far East rests upon the shoulders of China and Japan, which have a common source of civilization and which are destined to exist side by side in the Orient, like the wheels of the same carriage. China possesses unlimited raw materials, but she is not in a position to develop them by herself alone; and she will meet keen competition should she attempt to export her raw materials into foreign markets.

"But Japan is not only an industrial nation, but she is also China's neighbor. Japan has not enough raw materials to carry on her industrial enterprises; and for the foregoing reasons, even when China becomes a powerful industrial nation, the relations between China and Japan will remain most intimate. As long as the development of China's natural resources cannot be made by herself alone, and so long as the Western Powers are ready to take every opportunity to enrich themselves at the expense of China, the mutual friendship between China and Japan is a prime necessity.

"The present boycott of Japanese goods which was started by some of the Chinese students who have been allowing themselves to be influenced by prejudice and empty sentiments, is most unfortunate from the standpoint of the interests of both countries. There is one thing that stands in the way of mutual economic co-operation between China and Japan, and that is the Likin tax. If this is abolished, the investment of foreign capital will be more easily made and the Sino-Japanese joint enterprises will be greatly increased.

"Politically speaking, it may be said that, if China and Japan should join hands no matter what attitude a third power may adopt, peace will prevail on the Far East. For the realization of this aspiration Japan must not interfere with the internal problems of China; and China, on the other hand, must endeavor to promote friendship and understanding between the two Oriental Powers, casting aside her policy of befriending distant nations and alighting nearby countries.

"Of course, in the past, Japan has committed various blunders, but, at present, the enlightened citizens of Japan have come to realize the mistakes of her former policies, especially that of the 21 demands treaty which was concluded by the Okuma cabinet but which was later repudiated in part by the Hara Ministry. And at present only unobjectionable parts of the treaty remain. The return of Shantung to China by our country was effected in accordance with the announcement which the Japanese delegates made at the Versailles Conference, and not pressed by the Washington Conference. Japan took this course because she was desirous of China's prosperity and the advancement of her interests, and because friendship and co-operation between the two countries is the only guarantee for the peace of the Far East and the mutual preservation of China and Japan."

Test Huge British Plane In France

THE first of the new torpedo-launching planes built by the Handley Page Company for the British Government has had its successful test flight at the Bourget (France) Aerodrome. The four wing spreads are movable, in order to reduce the speed of the machine in the air and permit accurate launching of the torpedo. The motor of the plane is stopped over the target, and the machine becomes almost stationary until the torpedo is dropped, when the motor is started again.

Queensland Premier Dislikes Standard Railway Gauge

Brisbane, Queensland, (Special Correspondence) — Speaking of the proposed uniform railway gauge scheme, involving conversion of existing Queensland lines to the 4ft. 8½ in. standard which involved bridge construction across the Brisbane River, Edward Theodore, Premier of Queensland, observed that the first section of the scheme, linking capitals, would take six or seven years to complete from the time the work began. This clearly indicates that he is not optimistic regarding the progress of the vast standard gauge scheme.

Mr. Theodore's remarks have been the more noticed, as he is regarded as the next Labor Prime Minister of Australia, and his attainment of this position may be nearer than many imagine. He cannot be regarded as an enthusiast for the uniform gauge scheme during the present economic position of the country. Queensland, like all the Australian states, finds her railways an expensive necessity.

A BOLD SUGGESTION
Last year, Queensland, the great northern State of Australia, lost no less than $1,000,000 on her railways. The State is rich, and has possibly the brightest future of any part of Australia, but it cannot stand a constant and serious drain upon the financial resources of the people. A bold suggestion has been made by a prominent and distinguished Australian, that a syndicate of British financial houses should purchase and run the entire railway system of the Continent. This proposal was made in all seriousness, but the people of the Commonwealth would prefer to run their railways at a loss, rather than lose control, no matter what golden hopes might lie ahead.

There are nine "developmental" lines with a mileage of 904. These lines cost about $4,500,000, and the interest alone absorbs over $200,000 a year. Last year, to earn $289,000, Queensland spent $279,000, and it is found that there was a loss of well over $193,000 after debiting interest and working costs.

There are of course other causes of the serious financial position of these railways, the chief being the isolated, or branch lines. These discouraging lines, some 75 in number, covering 3,362 miles, have absorbed over $19,000,000. These non-paying railway ventures comprise nearly 60 percent of the total railway mileage of Queensland. The Railways Commissioner, by way of apology for the unsound financial position, declares that: "No railways in Australia, or in fact, any railway, so far as I am aware, showed a profit after paying working expenses and interest last year." Generally speaking, Australians take little interest in their railways, but they express mild surprise on learning that an annual loss has been reduced.

DISCUSS NORTH-SOUTH LINE
Federal authorities have been discussing the proposed north-south transcontinental line. It is usually introduced at election time—then shelved. There is an agitation, however, against the original and direct route, much to the indignation of South Aus-

Vandyke Picture Is Sold For $150,000 At Christie's

London, by mail.—Big prices were paid at Christie's for old masters in the famous collection of the late Earl of Brownlow, which came under the hammer recently. The sales totaled $32,447 (about $425,250).

The Messrs. Duveen gave the best price of the day, $150,000, for Van Dyck's portrait of Anton Trieste, Burgomaster of Ghent. A record breaking price was paid by the same dealer for Albert Cuyp's "Maas at Dordrecht," which was knocked down for $90,000. The Duveens also paid $18,000 for Gentile Bellini's portrait of "Bartolommeo Colleoni." The total for the three paintings is $268,000.

Other pictures bringing high prices were Giovanni Bellini's "Adoration of the Shepherds," at $21,000, which was sold in ten minutes, and Cima da Conegliano's "Holy Family," at $45,000.

The Van Dyck purchase proved to be the crowning event of an exciting afternoon, the Duveens having kept competition in obtaining this canvas, which is rated by connoisseurs of repute as being one of the most impressive of the Van Dyck portraits. It measures 56½ by 44 inches, and the subject is a man about sixty years of age with strong countenance. He is represented to the knees in a black dress with loose black silk cloak, broad white lawn collar and cuffs. The left hand is placed on the back of a chair, and the right, on the thumb of which is a jeweled ring, is at his side. The head painted in full light is modelled in the most solid impasto with astonishing mastery and extraordinary clearness.

This picture has figured in seven important London exhibitions since the early part of the nineteenth century, each time the owner being a member of the Brownlow family, coming into possession of this line from Sir Abraham Hume, Baronet, whose second daughter married the first Earl Brownlow.

"The Maas at Dordrecht with a Ferry Boat," signed A. Cuyp, measuring 44½ by 66, is a view looking along the river towards the church and buildings of Dordrecht, in front of which is a long line of sailing boats laden with figures. There is a small boat to the right carrying a trumpeter and seven other men, but the dominating piece is the ferry boat carrying numerous figures, notably a man beating a drum. Light summer clouds appear in the sky and the water sparkles with a thousand varied hues. Experts pronounce this the masterpiece of the artist and it is thought that yesterday's price of $90,000 is a record for his canvases.

Sir Joseph Duveen, in speaking of the purchase last evening, said the paintings would be brought to this country in the early fall.

tralia, and Queensland frankly is doing all in its power to gain the line through her territory by deviation to Camooweal.

The Queensland or eastern route as it is termed, is regarded in this state as the only possible one from a developmental point of view. Moreover, they recall the fact, and most emphatically, that when Sir Joseph Cook was Prime Minister, he said that this route would be the means of linking up Port Darwin, the capital of the northern territory, with the capital cities of Australia, which would be a "great advance for the purpose of defense, intercommunication and national development."

Queensland would welcome a federal line to its border and would even help in continuing the line through its territory. The State has vision, not only of a great improvement in its railway system, but sees real development ahead, under a federal scheme. It foresees healthier railway revenue, and a stronger financial position. In other words Queensland sees salvation from federal intervention in constructing the second transcontinental railway partly through her country, and it must be agreed that this great enterprise would not only benefit Queensland, but would generally benefit the entire continent of Australia.

MAH JONGG SET LEAPS SKYWARD, CRAZE INCREASE

Local Stock Sold Out As Large
Shipments Are Sent To States

That Mah Jongg is proving very popular in the United States is indicated by the fact that over 10,000 sets were purchased by local firms for exportation during the past four days, says a report from Chinese Mah Jongg manufacturers here.

The demand for Mah Jongg sets is so large that all stocks in Shanghai have been sold out. Local firms consequently have sent buyers to Soochow with a view to meeting the pressing demand from America. It is reported that the Chung Hui Mah Jongg Association here recently dispatched representatives to Soochow with instructions that they buy spot goods to the extent of $10,000, but after a week's negotiation they only returned with $8,000 worth of ordinary sets. It is said that some fifty representatives of local firms are in Soochow, each trying to secure the largest quantity of Mah Jongg sets now being produced.

This naturally has induced many unemployed persons to join in the flourishing trade of Mah Jongg manufacturing. Exporters receive wages ranging between $70 and $100 a month, while even unskilled laborers get as much as $1 a day. Although the price of bones has risen to $39 per picul and that of the bamboo mounting to 2 each, each manufacturer of Mah Jongg does not have to worry over the high cost of production. An ordinary set which was sold at $5 can now be easily disposed of at $15.

The Chinese declare that foreigners err greatly in saying that Mah Jongg is a game of pure chance. It will take at least ten years, a Chinese who teaches Mah Jongg to foreigners says, before the average foreign Mah Jongg player can understand the technique, and hence the real interest, of the game.

The foreigners may boast of their intellectual superiority, he remarks, but they certainly betray their "dullness" when they play Mah Jongg. Every Chinese, he points out, who has tried "Poker" for a few hours, can display his or her acquisition of the English terms used in the game, but the foreigners playing Mah Jongg insist on naming the cards according to the pictures appearing thereon, such as "a bird," "a circle," instead of calling them "Yi Shu" and "Yi Tang."

Youths Leave U. S. For China In Skiff

San Francisco, April 30.—Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn have nothing on 6-year-old Herbert Boen in the line of adventure and exploration.

What's more, Herbert, who answers to the name of "Mulligan," when called by his companions, has something of a shade on Tom and Huck in that Tom and his companion didn't have any rum smugglers to chase them on their journey up and down the Mississippi.

Thus it was that, in command of "Mulligan," the good ship "Where-to?" a fourteen-foot skiff, pulled out from Thompson's Ship Building Company's wharf at Hunter's Point shortly after 9 o'clock yesterday morning, headed for the open sea. In fact, "Mulligan," his 11-year-old brother Roy and 9-year-old Will Stott, who comprised the crew, were not sure just where they were headed.

They had heard something of China and the Yellow Sea, with its pirates, and then during the last few months they had heard of the daring rumrunners plying between the booze fleet lying just outside the three-mile limit and the shore.

"We didn't know just where we was going when we started," declared Skipper "Mulligan" as he told the story of their trip to sea yesterday afternoon, eating sandwiches and buns which had been contributed by members of the Harbor Police Station.

THEY COULD SWIM
"It may have been rumrunners," he added, for "Mulligan" was the only spokesman for the crew of the good ship "Where-to?" His older brother and Bill Stott just grinned and said: "We know how to swim."

From 9 o'clock in the morning until almost three o'clock yesterday afternoon the "Where-to?" bobbed about in San Francisco bay until it was sighted by Lawrence Hagan, skipper of the Crowley launch No. 15, and towed to shore at the foot of Howard street.

"Too rough for you kids to be out in the small boat," announced Hagan, addressing the trio of adventurers, as Superintendent William Ross phoned to the harbor police asking that they come over and take charge of the boys.

"WE AIN'T AFRAID"
"What's the idea?" demanded "Mulligan." "We ain't afraid." Then, when Hagan turned to speak with Ross, the trio jumped back into their skiff and once more put out sea.

Policeman James Wall and Engineer John Lettmore decided the only thing for them to do was to give chase, and started out in a police launch. A strong sea was rolling and it was all the police could do to make fast to the "Where-to?"

"Had a tough time getting hold of their boat," announced Wall, as he related the story of the rescue. "The tide was running fast right out through the Gate." Last night the three boys were taken home by their parents. The two Boen brothers live at 1201 Hudson avenue and Stott lives at 540 Emus street.

P. And O. Wireless Operator's Marriage

London, May 14.—The Countess of Stradbroke has arrived in London, and states that she and the Earl had been aware of Lady Pleasant's engagement for some time. Their daughter had their full consent to be engaged, and also to becoming a Roman Catholic, of which Lady Pleasant had long thought. The Countess's wedding present was the famous pearls, formerly her grandmother's. The wedding was hurried for business reasons.

Mr. McKenna, like his wife, was 24 years old, and formerly worked in the mines, where his father was a waggoner.

An earlier message stated:—The wedding was quietly solemnized, in the mining village of Shotts, Lanarkshire, to-day between Lady Pleasant Rous, daughter of the Earl of Stradbroke, and Mr. Owen McKenna, a wireless operator in the P. and O. Co. The marriage was the outcome of a meeting aboard a Haier going to Rangoon.

President Reported Ready To Yield To Militarists

Peking, June 11.—A report emanating from reliable Government circles but not yet confirmed states that bearded day and night by a mob of Gendarmes, President Li Yuan-hung has found it futile to put up a further stand against the coercion of the Chihli militarists. He has decided to leave for Tientsin tomorrow.

Simultaneously, as President Li quits the Hsin Hui Palace, the report adds, Premier Chang Shou-wei will return to the Capital from Tientsin to act as some sort of regent, pending the "election" of a formal President in the person of General Tiao Kun, the recognized head of the Peking Oligarchy.

Meanwhile, continues the report, the Ching Hsueh Hui party, led by Li Ken-yuan and Peng Yun-yi, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce and Education respectively, encourages President Li to fight as long as he can. This advice is in its own interests. Thus, the report points out, President Li has to encounter not only the threatening Gendarmes but in addition the intriguing political schemers.

What aggravates the already chaotic situation is the demonstration of the so-called "Citizens of the Republic" against the Chihli militarists, against President Li today. As usual, the demonstration took the form of mass meetings complete with grandiose resolutions and fiery-voiced denunciations, all demanding the immediate retirement of the poor "Buddha."

Dr. W. W. Yen appears to be in earnest, when he refuses the Premiership. Apart from the many perplexing political issues which would be involved in the event of his assumption of that office, Dr. Yen cannot muster up courage to accept the offer, because of his failure to secure a Finance Minister that will enable him to tide over the forthcoming financial crisis at the Dragon Boat Festival.

Dr. C. T. Wang has offered his service as a mediator between President Li and the Chihli faction. He suggests the following terms:—

1. President Li Yuan-hung to issue a statement declaring that he will retire before October 10, the National Anniversary of the Republic.

2. The Chihli Tsuchuns and Super-Tsuchuns to order their troops or the Gendarmes under the control of their subordinate officers to pay due respect to President Li.

3. Meantime, Parliament to settle promptly the question with regard to President Li's term of office and to prepare for the election of a new President.

President Li called at the residence of Mr. Wu Chin-lin, Speaker of the House of Representatives this morning, but he was told by the gate-keeper that Mr. Wu was out. So President Li returned to the Palace in sad plight.

In a despatch addressed to Parliament, President Li calls attention to the siege of his private residence by the Gendarmes. The message says that after Premier Chang resigned and left for Tientsin, President Li had sent an emissary to apologize to him. In reply, Premier Chang said that the Cabinet crisis was the outcome of very complex political issues and he merely deemed it expedient to quit.

The next day, it states, the Gendarmes besieged the Chihli Hall in the Presidential Palace and demanded payment of their salaries. Two days later they surrounded President Li's private residence together with a mob of irresponsible people. The situation it points out, is very grave.

Both Dr. W. W. Yen and Dr. Wellington Koo, it continues, have declined the Premiership. But, it says, it is rather significant that Premier Chang has refused to counter-sign a blank mandate which will be issued when his successor is decided upon.

In conclusion, President Li explores the fact that while the services of the old Cabinet Ministers cannot be retained, attempts at the formation of a new Cabinet have wilfully been frustrated. And even the personal liberty of the President, guaranteed by the

MANUAL TRAINING CENTER TO HOLD EXHIBIT JUNE 27

Invitations have been issued to the public to attend an exhibition of models made in the Council's Manual Training Center, at the Thomas Hanbury School for Boys. The center was originally started in a workshop in Ningpo Road during the summer of last year. During the hot weather a commendable interest in the new venture resulted in a very satisfactory exhibition there, but with the reopening of the public school in September the workshop was deserted for school books.

The scheme of training was such a sound one that it seemed a pity to let it drop altogether and an appeal was made for funds to save the property from dispersal.

As a result the school as it stood was offered unconditionally to the Council, who accepted it and housed it at the Thomas Hanbury School for Boys. It was re-started in January this year.

Pupils now attend from all over the settlement. The first school to apply for admission was the German School, from which institution came a number of girls as well as boys.

Other schools represented are: The Holy Trinity Cathedral School Boys, The Holy Trinity Cathedral School Girls, The Public School for Boys, The Thomas Hanbury School for Boys, The Jewish School, The Joan of Arc School, Evening Class—Adults.

The announcement of the proposed exhibition at once aroused a great deal of interest in the work and no less than eight prizes have been received towards the encouragement of individuals. But beyond this two magnificent Challenge Shields have been presented for competition between the schools attending.

The exhibition will remain open for three days, June 27, 28 and 29 and it is hoped that parents will avail themselves of the opportunity to see what can be done with tools and timber by youngsters under expert guidance.

The school is situated at 63 Haskell Road, not far from the Range and North Szechuen Road crossing.

Sarnia, Ont., May 16.—A cow which wandered from her pasture late last night bumped a Pere Marquette passenger train off the track four miles from this city. The locomotive turned over, breaking the leg of David Burwell, engineer, and slightly injuring Fireman Foster. Besides the locomotive and tender, the baggage car and one passenger coach left the rails, but the passengers escaped with a slight shaking up. The cow was the only fatality.

IS CANADA BEING AMERICANISED?

Ottawa—The Canadian Parliament the other day spent four hours discussing a minor phase of the "Americanisation of Canada"—the flooding of the country by American magazines, Sunday newspapers and other periodicals.

A Toronto Press correspondent. It was brought up by Mr. H. C. Hocken, M. P. for a Toronto riding, himself the editor of the organ in Canada of the Orange Order and obviously speaking from a brief prepared by the Canadian National Newspaper and Periodical Association. Indicating a widespread interest in the situation were a long list of resolutions deploring the present state of affairs, passed by various bodies, including women's Liberal Clubs, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire, Canadian Author's Association, Chambers of Commerce, Association of Canadian Clubs and so on.

The discussion demonstrated with facts and figures what every observer of Canadian news stands has known in a general way—namely that the periodic literature read in Canada is largely American. Mr. Hocken said there is only one magazine in Canada that has a circulation of 75,000, while there are American magazines whose Canadian circulations alone considerably exceed that figure. In ten years the value of American magazines entering Canada has grown from $8,000,000 to $3,000,000. The Canadian mails are carrying millions of pounds a year of United States periodicals under the same nominal rates that apply to home production.

"200 PERCENT AMERICAN" Among the speakers who took a particularly serious view of the situation was Mr. Meighen, ex-Premier and leader of the Opposition. "The literature of this country," he said, "is more American today by 100 percent yes, by 200 percent than it was ten years ago."

Various proposals were put forward for cutting down the imports of American periodicals. One was to tax them 10 cents a pound. Another advocated by Mr. Hocken, was to tax their advertising contents 15 cents a pound. On one American magazine alone this would yield $7,000 an issue, and on four magazines it would yield $644,000 a year. Another proposal was to assist Canadian publishers by placing their raw materials on the free Customs list. Unfortunately, the tariff remedy cannot be made to apply to brains, which it was sorrowfully admitted migrate to the best market. To many of the speakers the whole circulation of American publications, in so far as they disseminated American views and tastes and ideals and glorified American life and condition, was objectionable. The gloom and forebodings of Mr. Meighen and Mr. Hocken were not shared by some of the members who declared that whether the protection of industry was desirable or not, no impediment should be placed in the way of the free circulation of literature, and that the public should be allowed to buy.

Ben Jonson And The Tribe Of Ben

One reason for Ben Jonson's early unpopularity was the fact that he was "ever a fighter," and during the century following his death the memory was strong of his magisterial and arrogant treatment of his brother writers. He was a burly dogmatist, not unlike the even more famous John of a century and a half later, but with this difference, that while he made enemies by his writings, he made friends by his talk. The good nature, we may suppose, which showed in his face was not discernible in cold print. "The truth is," says Gifford, "that Jonson, far from being vindictive, was one of the most placable of mankind; he blustered, indeed, and talked angrily; but his heart was turned to affection, and his enemies appear to have been short-lived, while his friendships were durable and sincere,"—an estimate which, some say, applies very well to Gifford himself.

That Jonson was not disliked or depreciated by all the wits of the seventeenth century is proved by the group of poets who called themselves "the Tribe of Ben." Among those who revered him were Donne, Beaumont, Fletcher, Shirley, Field, Seldon, Waller, and, above all, Herrick. The last speaks of the "Alchemist" as the "best of plays," and of its author as the best of poets; and his taking little "Ode for Ben Jonson" cannot be quoted too often:

Say how, or when
Shall we thy guests
Meet at those lyric feasts,
Made at the Sun,
The Dog, the Triple Tun.

My Ben
Or come again,
Or send to us
Thy wit's great over-plus:
But teach us yet
Wisely to husband it:

Least we that talent spend:
And having once brought to an end
That precious stock, the store
Of such a wit, the world should Have no more.

There is, too, Aubrey's delightful picture of Shakespeare and Jonson in argument. But one might go on indefinitely quoting tributes, even of later date, from Lamb to Swinburne.

No one can now wonder or be surprised, or whether he was right or wrong, in his battles with the wits. We may wonder, nevertheless, why, with so much illustrious commendation, he is so little read. For he was a massive genius, though more scholar than poet, and with a scholar's pedantry and some of a scholar's affectations. His plays are mines of curious lore and human wisdom; he was fundamentally a good man of a larger and simpler piety; and, while his verse is usually more rugged than musical, he has, especially in the Masques and in the poems called "The Forest" and "Underwoods," a classic sense of form and a lightness of touch, at times, that are rare even in his age.

The truth seems to be that two causes can be assigned for his present neglect: the uncompromising realism of his pictures of contemporary life, and the alloy of lead, as one critic calls it—the academic heaviness, which weighs his plays. It is an instructive study to compare his "Sejanus" or "Catiline" with Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" or even "Coriolanus." Jonson writes in constant dread of the scholars, not daring to introduce a detail for which he cannot name his authority, while Shakespeare writes in the bluntness of ignorance. One is reminded of the story told of Dickens and Carlyle, that when the former was planning his "Tale of Two Cities," he asked the latter to send him a "few books" about the French Revolution; and that, a day or so later, a truck backed up at Dickens's door, piled with books. We know that Carlyle read everything he could get (except the MSS and books in the British Museum, which he ignored in a huff); and we suspect that Dickens merely read two or three books, and trusted to his sense of the period for the rest. Jonson's Roman plays are immensely interesting to the scholar, but the public has persisted in leaving them unread. And his two monumental comedies, "The Alchemist" and "The Fox," conceived, some one has said, more nearly in the spirit of Moliere than any other English plays, are equally neglected, because they require an encyclopedia at one elbow and a dictionary at the other, with easy access to a large reference library besides. Of all his plays, "Every Man in His Humour" held the stage almost to our time, with "The Silent Woman" a close second; and they are still given now and then by stage societies or college amateurs as a homage to the masques, such as "A Hum and Cry After Cupid" and "Oberon." But while Shakespeare seems to be more popular than ever, Jonson's dramas have virtually vanished from the stage. Of them all, the modern general reader will perhaps like best "The Sad Shepherd: or, a Tale of Robin Hood," though it is unfortunately only a fragment. It is, however, an exquisite fragment, full of the spirit of youth, though it was his last work.

When all is said, the map who said of Shakespeare, "I loved the man and do honor to his memory on this side idolatry as much as any can," who wrote the tender lines on Salathiel Pavy, the boy-actor, the noble elegy on Sir Lucius Cary, and the exquisite lyrics so often reprinted; who was easily the head and front of the Mermaid poets, as choice a company as England has known—such a man is not likely soon to be forgotten.

His epigram, "To My Book-seller," is not only characteristic, but is in point:

Thou that mak'st gain thy end,
and, wisely well,
Call'st a book good, or bad, as it doth sell,

Use mine so, too; I give thee
leave; but crave,
For the luck's sake, it thus much favor have,
To lie upon thy stall, till it be sought;

Not offered, as it made suit to be bought;
Nor have my title-leaf on posts
or walls,
Or in cleft sticks, advanced to names; whose knight less

"Terms" were idle people, and "send it to Bucklers-bury" means "send it to the grocer's as wrapping-paper."

Heavy Rainfall Godsend To Hunan

(Independent News Service)
Yochow, Hunan, June 4.—The abundant rains of the last week in May have revived the spirits of all. Towns-people can eat pork again, the ban, due to the drought having been raised, and farmers have been more than busy planting rice. The tea producing regions, Niehkiashih and Yangtze, are having much better business than for several years; and it is well that it is so, for most of the tea terraces have been neglected, or planted in beans and barley.

Mission schools both Ziener Girls' School in the city, and Huping College at Lakeside, have recently held their annual Field Days. Both were eminently successful, the former marked with grace and beauty, the latter with manly strength and sportsmanship.

A new Higher Primary boarding school has been opened by the above mentioned Mission in the city, and is known as "Ling Tung." A formal opening was held June 2.

Mr. Charles M. Hoy, son of Dr. W. E. Hoy of Yochow, arrived from America in January to collect unfamiliar animals for Smithsonian Institute, Washington. He had great difficulty, owing to Chinese official red tape, to get his outfit into his collecting district. He is at work, however, and has his first consignment about ready for shipment.

The roadbed of the Canton-Hankow Railway has been in a wretched condition for some time. Sleepers being so rotten that trains have had to creep along at a rate of about 10 miles an hour through this district. New sleepers now are arriving and being put in place.

Adrenalin Attracts Medical Attention

THE official cases reported recently of the use of adrenalin in restoring heart action to persons supposedly dead has attracted widespread attention from the medical profession. Officials of the Tri-State Medical Association, made up of 30,000 physicians in Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota, and touring the East, attending clinics in the leading universities, including Yale, Harvard, Cornell and Columbia, paying especial attention to the injection of adrenalin into the muscles of the heart to restore life and to prolong it. The officials

Painted 'Unknown' Stirs Art Critics

London, May 8.—Easily the most commented upon painting in the Royal Academy is Sir William Orpen's "Unknown British Soldier in France," showing the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles where the Peace Treaty was signed, in the centre of which lies a coffin flanked by two corpse-like tin-hatted soldiers, practically nude, with two cupid-like "Ghost Soldiers" hovering against the sky.

The allegorical significance of the picture is intriguing the critics many, of whom describe the painting as satirical.

Sir William Orpen himself, interviewed by the Evening Standard, denied that he intended to satirise anybody or to set a problem, but he painted in all seriousness, and humility. He reveals the fact that the picture is the last of a series of three executed on behalf of the Imperial War Museum. He spent nine months in painting statesmen, generals and admirals. They "all seemed so unimportant beside the reality," that he rubbed them out and substituted the figures of two dead comrades.

It is understood that the Museum is not exercising the option to acquire the present work.

Walter, complained a customer, "I cannot stand the hammering of the workmen at the back of the hotel. Are the premises being enlarged?"

"No," replied the waiter reassuringly; "there are no workmen there. What you hear is the cook preparing your rump steak."

Grocer: (at telephone): "Hallo, this is Smith's."
Customer: "Will you please send me the eggs I ordered this morning? This is Mrs. Winter. I want them very bad."
And yet she complained the next day because she got what she said she wanted.

Royal Academy Banquet

London, May 6.—The annual Academy banquet at Burlington House yesterday evening was a brilliant function. Sir Aston Webb presiding over a distinguished company, including the Prince of Wales, the Ministers and ex-Ministers, and prominent representatives of the Church, Art and Literature, the Bench and Bar, the Navy and Army, the Air Force, the Dominions, and the United States.

The Prince of Wales, replying to the loyal toast, expressed the opinion that war facilitated the development of arts because it had made the average man more sensitive to artistic suggestion. The graveyards in France which he had just visited owed their very real beauty and dignity to the British people's possibly unconscious, but genuine, love of beauty.

Colonel Amery, replying to the toast of the Forces, said that with the surrender of the German navy concentration in Home waters had lost its meaning, and we had now to consider the new centre to be on the middle of the seas for our navy. They could no longer look only to this small island in the North Sea for the full strength of the Empire's Navy, but it must depend on all partners and the full development of the resources and manhood of the great Commonwealth of the Empire.

Sir Samuel Hoare believed that when the facts were fully weighed the expansion of the Air Force was bound to occur, but it must be so organised as to make aviation and air defence and integral part of the life of the nation. A definite place should be found in Home defence for the growing number of men of every class who are yearly taking a keener interest in aviation.

Sir Aston Webb, proposing His Majesty's Ministry, said he understood that the Government was considering the possibility of creating a Commission of Fine Arts somewhat on the American lines to advise on all matters affecting the aesthetic amenities of the towns and countryside. He suggested that steps should be taken towards erecting a great national war memorial.

Successful Operation For Angina Pectoris

General interest was created at a meeting of the Medical Congress at Vienna recently says an Exchange message, by a statement of Professor Wenckelbach on the treatment of angina pectoris. By an operation, he said, total relief could be obtained from its pains. "Attempts have been made before to cure this agonising disease, which may be described as cramp of the heart, by operation, and with some success," said a doctor to a Daily Mail reporter. "Dr. Jonnesco, a French surgeon, by excising a small portion of a nerve (the left cervical sympathetic nerve) completely cured a man who for years had been suffering from severe pain. "The report does not indicate the nature of Professor Wenckelbach's operation. Although there are many theories we are quite in the dark as to what causes angina pectoris, from which women rarely suffer. It is mostly a disease of men of the better classes, and is particularly common among doctors and among Jews. Mental strain and worry predispose to it. Over 700 people die in England every year from it, so it is not at all uncommon."

Spot bar silver was up 1-16d. and forward 3-16d. in London yesterday. The New York price advanced to 65 1/2 cents and the London-New York cross rate to 46 1/2%. The only change in our Official quotations here to-day was a drop in the Franc rate to 1115.

Our market in the early part of the morning was firm but eased off slightly during the day. At one time business in Sterling was done at 3-1/4 for June delivery, 3-1-1/16 for July and 3-1/4 for August. Gold Dollars were done at 72 1/2 for June and 72 1/2 for forward deliveries. However, there were buyers at these rates and in the afternoon the market eased off considerably closing with no sellers of Sterling at better than 3-1/4 for June delivery, 3-1/4 for July and 3-1/4 for August.

The best sellers of Gold Dollars were offering 72 1/2 for June delivery, 72 1/2 for July and 72 1/2 for forward. There were sellers of Yen at 67 1/2 for near and 67 1/2 for forward deliveries.

In the afternoon Banks were quoting 3/2 1/2, 74 and 1145 for Sterling, Gold Dollar and Franc bills respectively.

India and China both bought silver in London yesterday and the market is reported as closing steady. New York also report their market as steady.

P. AND O. ORDERS

BIG INCREASE IN FIRM'S TONNAGE

The P. and O. Company have recently placed orders with Messrs. Harland and Wolff for the construction at that firm's Greenock yard of two passenger steamers of 15,200 tons which will combine the excellences of the Kaiser-Hind with some features of the Naldora and Narkunda. A third ship of the same type will be constructed by Messrs. Harland, Leslie and Co., at Newcastle.

The Greenock yard has also an order for a 10,000 ton passenger express steamer of the "Salsette" type. All the new vessels, which are intended for the Indian Mail Service, will have reciprocating engines and will be fitted to burn oil fuel under Scotch boilers.

The British India Company has in course of construction, or projected, no less than ten steamers; five of the "P" class of 8,000 tons each, intended for the Company's Calcutta-Japan service, of which three will be fitted for oil fuel and two to burn coal; two single screw motor-driven cargo ships each of 2,300 gross tons. There are besides the Khandalla, 7,300 tons, for the Company's Bombay-East Africa Line, with twin screw reciprocating engines, the twin motor-cargo-ship, Dalmatia, of 6,000 tons, and the Narva, a single screw coal-burning turbine steamer, the two last being intended for the Indian Coast Service.

The new tonnage at present projected by the P. and O. Company, (including the Maloja and Mooltan, each of 21,000 tons and now well on the way to completion) amounts to 97,600 tons gross, and by the British India Company 64,400 tons; together a total of 162,000 gross tons.

Peer Puts In Bill To Abolish Titles

London, May 9.—Ponsonby, who is himself of aristocratic lineage, drew cheers—both approving and ironic—when he introduced into the House of Commons a Bill for the termination of hereditary titles, enabling peers to renounce their titles by deed poll and precluding any heir or heiress born after the passage of the Bill from succeeding to a title.

Mr. Ponsonby said he believed that many people were anxious to drop their titles, especially those whose high-sounding appellations were an embarrassment, and also peers of ancient lineage who were dissatisfied with the colleagues presented to them during the past few years.

He foreshadowed a cessation of the conferment of hereditary titles when the Labour Party came into office.

Escapes Jailer With Paper Pistol

North Bay, Ont., June 11.—Whipping from his pocket a pistol made principally of cardboard and black paper and crying "hands up!" Leo Rogers escaped today from a courtroom full of spectators and court officials, where he was about to be placed on trial for robbery. Still brandishing the paper pistol, he stopped an automobile and compelled the driver to rush him at top speed for several blocks, when he leaped out and disappeared. He left the weapon in the car and court attaches were deeply chagrined when they learned the secret of its construction.

Hilda liked to play hockey, but had some difficulty in indulging in her favorite sport because every time she stayed away from school the teacher sent a note to her mother. One day she decided to try to circumvent this embarrassing procedure. She rang up her teacher from a call office, and, disguising her voice as well as she was able, said: "I have rung up to tell you that Hilda will not be at school today." "Oh, very well," replied the teacher. "Who is it speaking?" To this unexpected question poor Hilda replied: "This is my mother!"

The Foreign Captives Freed

INsofar as foreigners are concerned, the Paotaku ordeal is over. The bandits have released their foreign captives. Over this happy issue, however, confused details of the settlement may be, the friends and relatives and the captives themselves, are to be congratulated.

Insofar as the Chinese are concerned, apparently, there is a different aspect. Our dispatches at this writing do not indicate that the Chinese prisoners have been set free. Not all of them at least. And we do not see how this can be. A full settlement would seem to call for the release of all captives, irrespective of nationality, and the cessation of the pursuit of banditry by all of the Paotaku bandits—their re-enrollment in the army and, where this is not preferred, restoration to the rights of citizenship, etc.

Nobody will be satisfied with the settlement as it stands. The foreign powers will now bring pressure to the future. What will the Chinese do? Recurrence of the lawless outbreak at Lin-cheng, and toleration of the situation which previously prevailed, cannot be considered. If the remaining bandits refuse to give up their Chinese prisoners and the bandits elsewhere in China refuse to reform and give up the prisoners they are holding, the Chinese army which is accused of being forth to clear its name, and can only do this by ending banditry in China.

With the release of the foreigners who have been held captive for thirty-six days, the situation becomes this: All over China captives are being held for ransom, but they are Chinese held by Chinese. Therefore it is a matter for the Chinese to settle. Meantime the foreign powers will now take up the matter of the failure of China to govern herself and to afford protection to all foreigners who reside in China under treaty rights granted by the government of China.

Little had bought a new car, of which he was very proud. Directly he knew how to start it up, he went down the main road to show off his new possession.

Having pursued his erratic course for about two hundred yards he was pulled up by the policeman on point duty.

"You nearly ran over those two people," said that official.

"Sorry, officer! You see, I've only just got this car, and—"

"What's your name?" broke in the constable.

"Little" was the answer.

"Ah! A Little learning is a precious thing!" chuckled the cultured cop, so tickled at his luck that he let the transgressor go free.

Ku Klux Klans Of Germany

"Konsul" And Its Kindred Organisations That Promote Reaction By Methods Of Terrorism

This article, by one of the best informed and ablest of American writers on political subjects, is intended to be the first of a series the author is preparing for the new American magazine of international affairs, Our World. Mr. Merz has spent most of the last year in Europe.

BY CHARLES MERZ

Two hundred bodies line a road that crosses Germany from despotism to the young republic. Travellers along the highway—Rathenau, Erzberger, Eisner, and a host of humbler others—these were men whose crime it was to believe in the idea of a democratic Germany and who paid the penalty for their faith by meeting death in ambush.

Is there some power that works behind the scenes in Central Europe? Rathenau is killed. For two weeks the press resounds with rumor. This murder, it is hinted, does not stand alone. It is not a planless, isolated fact. The same hand that struck at Liebknecht and at Haase struck again, at Rathenau. A murder bunk works tirelessly, cutting down, man after man, the partisans of German liberalism. That bunk is secret. Masked behind a veil, no public knows where it begins or where it ends. Its shadow lengthens over Germany. It crosses frontiers. Down the valley of the Danube—eastward into Poland, westward into France—this nameless, Ku Klux Klan of Central Europe reaches its long arms; growing every day in power—vast, inscrutable, and cautious.

So the news dispatches hint, when Rathenau is killed. And to that theme they double back, as murder follows murder. How real is this masked terror, lurking there behind the news? How does it work? What does it mean to the peace of Europe?

MOST SINISTER OF KLAN

Five men sit around a table in the Freuden Garten, in Munich or Berlin. Never more than five. Waters hurry past them, wiping with white aprons their foaming steins of beer. Across the room some noisy family is celebrating a birthday with laughter and much thumping on the table. A violin is playing Wagner. It is a typical German biergarten, sluggish, crowded, warm—everybody willing to drink the health of everybody else. But these five have a special toast. They drink to a death tomorrow.

"Konsul," the most sinister of all the German Ku Klux Klans, is organized in Groups of Five. One man knows the other four with whom he meets and works. He knows the organizer who first enlisted him, and who has long since vanished from the scene. Beyond that he knows nothing. He does not even know the members of another Group of Five. The trial of the men who came near killing Maximilian Harden showed that the director of the plot did not know from whom the money came for his "expenses." It reached him by general delivery mail.

Always, orders to these Groups of Five arrive mysteriously. Some central bureau pulls the strings. And "Konsul" keeps its secrets. The actual culprits may be caught, in any case of murder; but this loose form of organization shields the men who set the machinery in motion. That is what happened in the case of Walter Rathenau. And undoubtedly, it will happen again, tomorrow. For "Konsul" has not run its course in Germany.

ALLIED WITH REACTION

It is strongest, this alliance, in those parts of Germany where monarchism and reaction have the upperhand. Especially in East Prussia. In fact, so far as the organization has a history, that is where the story starts. Four years ago, an event long since forgotten in the swirl of later news, the Germans of East Prussia made an attempt to recover the Baltic provinces which the Treaty of Versailles had bestowed on certain smaller nations. For that adventure several thousand soldiers of the disbanded army volunteered. For the most part they were professional fighting men, with no corps left to join; they were attracted, too, by the promise of a parcel of land in case the enterprise succeeded. That land they never won. For the adventure failed. But the great land-owners of East Prussia, the famous "junkers," saw in these men an excellent body-guard against the encroachment of any form of Socialism, however mild. And they began to employ the jobless volunteers as "farm-hands."

"Farm-hands" they remain today—though in reality they are soldiers. They are well armed. For it is an open secret that a very fair amount of war material is still held by the monarchist junkers.

It is around this nucleus that "Konsul" was constructed. It is possible, today, to boast openly of affiliation with the order, in any part of East Prussia. It would have been possible to make the same boast anywhere, had not a second famous putch ended even more disastrously. This was the unsuccessful attempt of the military party to seize Berlin, in the spring of 1920, and to re-establish monarchism.

A "HERO'S" NICKNAME

Commanding a machine gun brigade in that struggle was a certain Captain Ehrhardt. If the affair had any hero, to Ehrhardt fell that role. When the putch failed, and the spirit it represented was driven underground, there began to spread through Germany a secret order that called itself, at first, "Organisation C"—and later took the name of "Konsul" because "Konsul" was the nickname of the celebrated Ehrhardt. In its growth this order had the support of the spiritual brethren of the Prussian junkers, everywhere: the blood-and-thunder militarists, the hundred percent monarchists, and at least one faction of the great industrialists (though that faction did not include the powerful Herr Siemens).

"Konsul" grew again, in the three years that followed. Outside of East Prussia it is strongest—again where reaction itself is strongest—in Bavaria and Mecklenburg. It puts its faith in militarism; rallies loyalty to the monarchists; whips up a riot of hatred against the Jews. How many of Germany's political murders are directly the result of its activities, there is no telling. One of the men who killed Rathenau confessed that he was "acting under orders from a secret society;" another was an erstwhile member of the Ehrhardt brigade. Ehrhardt himself is being held in prison on a charge of complicity in the affair.

Again, the men who killed Erzberger admittedly belonged to "Konsul." So did the men who attempted to kill Scheidemann by throwing prussic acid in his face. As for the rest, it is largely a matter of conjecture. Some light is thrown on the zeal of "Konsul" by this clause, reported on good authority to be the bulwark of its faith: "Traitors will be dealt with by the secret blood tribunal." "Traitors" is a way of saying "democrats."

"KONSULS" ALLIES

"Konsul" leads the way, in Germany. It sets the pace for political reaction and government by stealth. But it does not stand alone. It shares its field with friendly colleagues.

Of these, the best known is a certain Bavarian organization known as the "Hakenkreuz." Its members are chiefly youngsters, like the Fascist volunteers in Italy—and chiefly youngsters from the cities. The movement has not yet got a foothold among the peasantry. But through many a town in southern Germany it marches its young soldiers—wearing steel helmets, gray shirts, and brassards in the old imperial colors—headed by a red flag with a giant swastika and the short legend "Germany, Awake!"

"We have had no flag since 1918," proclaims the leader of the "Hakenkreuz," when Germany's time-honored flag was furled.

This leader is a certain Adolf Hitler—undoubtedly a candidate for the role of a German Mussolini. He seems, at the moment, to waver between politics and force, with one eye out for each. Twelve mass meetings in Bavaria recently organized the Hakenkreuz into a political party with a program "against the Jews, Communists, Bolshevism, Marxism, Socialism, Separatists, high cost of living, weak Berlin Government and Versailles Treaty."

Though he is theoretically opposed to violence, and helped, last August, to prevent a coup d'état in Munich, Hitler is no giant. It remains to be seen whether he can hold his followers in check. Ludendorff supports him. But the Socialists charge despite his vaunted patriotism, he is in the pay of France—so tirelessly does he attack republicanism in the Reich.

Hitler's movement is monarchist and anti-Semitic—may turn out, also, to rely on force; it is typical of one wing of German sentiment. But on the whole, it is a Fascist organization, rather than a Ku Klux Klan. It does not—yet, at least—employ terroristic methods and the mask. "Konsul" runs far ahead of it. But even "Konsul" by no means stands alone. For there are dozens of kindred orders scattered throughout Germany.

TERRORISM AND REACTION

For example, there is a secret alliance known as "Orgesch"—that name being a contraction of the word "Organisation" and "Escherich," founder of the order. It, too, is secret. Its methods are terrorism, and its aims so menacing that the Allied Governments ordered it disbanded. Escherich, its leader, boasted that it would be disbanded only over his dead body. But Escherich is still alive. His followers backed down, before an Allied threat to occupy the Ruhr. Today, however, "Orgesch" is back again. Reports from Germany describe the rallying of its clans, especially in Bavaria—where highlanders are "mobilising." And the threat to occupy the Ruhr, now a fait accompli, can no longer be invoked.

Like "Orgesch," again, is the "Schutz und Trutzbund," which concentrates its fire on the Jews. Its membership runs above a hundred thousand. Then there is the "Jungdeutscher Orden," somewhat smaller, but well-organized in military units. The "Alldeutscher Bund," equally secret in its membership, is somewhat more public in its aims; it frankly wants the Hohenzollerns back again.

The "Rossbach Organisation," headed by Lieutenant Rossbach, whose activities have recently commanded international attention as a result of the revelations of the Minister of the Interior, Dr. Severing, is another of these conspiracies—connected with the so-called "German Liberty Party."

All told, there are at least fifty organizations in Germany that follow "Konsul's" lead. It is hard to keep them separate. For except where they are strong enough to defy the national government, as in some sections of East Prussia, it is good tactics for them to keep changing names, headquarters, passwords, everything. Everything, of course, except their aims. To those they cling. Revenge, Reaction, and the Restoration of an order whose day is long past.

A FACTOR TO RECKON WITH

That these terror bands are factors to be reckoned with is certain. We in America do not know as much about them as we should, to have an understanding of the force now in conflict. And yet there is a danger, in handling such material as this, of straying from a realistic sense of values. I have heard it said, for instance, that these organizations are the real governors of Germany; that they gridiron the whole country with a fine net of espionage; that they fuse in common social brigandage at least a million desperate men.

"These people show marked contrast to the usual types of political criminal," declares one observer for a New York journal; "they belong neither to the sleek, cautious, polished, well educated, sophisticated type of political plotter, as a rule an army officer, nor to the type of picturesque fanatic; they are just coldblooded, brutal and defiant."

This is on the right track; but not altogether in proportion. It is true, for instance, that the membership of these orders runs above a million: "Konsul," 200,000 members; "Schutz und Trutzbund," 150,000; the "Jungdeutscher Orden," 80,000; and so on. The figures quickly reach a million; but reach it only by counting individual faces, however often they appear. For memberships overlap. One man may belong to a dozen different orders. Probably the estimate for "Konsul" alone is sufficient to include the whole family of terrorists.

Again, any line of demarcation which simply lists these organizations with men who are "cold-blooded, brutal and defiant" is a line too hard and fast to reveal their real significance in German life today. They have the out-low element. It is inevitable, with their secrecy and violence, that they should have it—and that is should lead the way. But the rank and file is drawn from a far wider circle.

BLOOD BROTHERS

For what we are witnessing in Germany is nothing isolated and unique, peculiar to that land alone. It is a development in progress the world over. Konsul, Ku Klux Klan and Fascism are blood-brothers—differing in methods and in degree of respectability, but issuing, at bottom, from similar factors; either impatience with what seems to them the indecision of existing governments; or racial or nationalistic motives; or resentment against new conditions of subordination in power or of loss of property, brought about by the results of the war and republican revolution; and determination, at all costs, and with a simple-mindedness characteristic of our simian race, to find somebody "responsible" for all trouble—somebody to put it in common terms, to play "the goat."

It is natural enough that in the beaten countries, where new governments are especially weak in prestige, and war burdens doubly heavy, these factors should operate with special force—and give birth to movements lawless and completely desperate. That is the situation which has made the Jew a target for attack in Germany, and enlisted in the ranks of "Konsul"—at the side of its political schemers and its paid assassins—a good many sober Germans ready to unload their troubles on the shoulders of a scape-goat.

Looked at in this light, "Konsul" and its kindred orders are more realistic outline. They do not become a whit less dangerous, or, in their methods, less despicable. But they regain a lost proportion. And they suggest again how closely interwoven are the troubles of the world. Whatever steadies Europe—upholds, in this instance, the hands or constitutional republicanism in Germany—strikes a more effective blow at "Konsul" than an army of police.

The immediate danger, of course, is the advantage which the monarchists may take, as a result of French occupation of the Ruhr. Apparently they are meeting with some success. "Deutschland über Alles" is having a new flare. Maximilian Harden has cabled recently that "in a hundred cinemas, parades, court pomp, royalists, demagogues and the like are pictured on the screen while thousands applaud to the echo." That did not happen, several months ago. And meantime, throughout the Ruhr, "Konsul" and its comrades are forming "death or glory" bands, pledged—so the news dispatches say—to sacrifice themselves before French machine-guns in a hopeless warfare.

What will happen ultimately to these secret bands in Germany is part of the larger question of what the rest of the world will contribute to sanity and restitution on the Rhine. What will happen, more immediately, is linked closely with the situation throughout Central Europe as a whole.

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

"He kisses me no more," she said: Her eyes and lashes moist with tears; "I wonder if his love is dead, His fondness blunted by the years? Have I grown old before my time, Or changed so much in other ways? He used in pretty prose and rhyme To make me happy with his praise."

"He gave me sweet proof that he cared When once we said our brief good-byes; His love was tenderly declared, And there were longings in his eyes; The things I touched, he used to say, Were sacred, after that, to him; How have I failed in any way? My heart is worm, my figure slim."

He closed his desk, and got his hat, His pretty secretary sighed, "Don't fail," he said, "to 'Phone to Pratt!'"

"I will remember," she replied, "That's all, I think," he said, and then

He hurried out, and closed the door; She settled to her work again, And frequently she sighed some more.

At home, he found things fine and fair, The table spread, the dinner good; His wife had dressed and fixed her hair, And looked as lovely as she could.

"How come?" he asked, with glad surprise, And what's the reason for all this?"

The lady looked through misty eyes, And, yes, by gosh, she got a kiss!

One of the standing mysteries of modern astronomy is the vastness of cosmic space. The nearest sun to ours is distant 25,500,000,000 miles. Sirius, as this was written, was twice as far or 51 trillion miles away. Vega, Canopus, Arcturus, Altair, Betelgeuse, Rigel, Antares, Capella, Polaris and other giant stars are farther and farther away, and fainter stars up to 20, 30, 100, 1,000 to, say, 10,000 light years, and so on out to the Milky Way.

The distance to this amazing assembly of stars is conservatively set at 150,000 light years. As it encircles the entire sidereal universe, its diameter is 300,000 light years. A light year is the distance traversed in 31,558,149 seconds by light moving with the speed of 186,324 miles per second.

In the great telescope there are seen many areas in the Milky Way where stars are so closely strewn that there does not seem to be room for others—75,000 have been photographed on one plate. This effect may be due to perspective, the telescope seeing many between the earth and the Way. The stars may be trillions of miles apart.

A boat in mid-Pacific ocean would not be more isolated relative to other humans nor more lonesome than is our solar system now. There may be colossal dark and invisible bodies moving at terrific speed in space, dead suns. But there is not even one where near our solar system at present.

Forget That Fear Of Failure And Go Ahead

BY J. J. MUNDY

It is better to go ahead on your own initiative than not to go ahead, ever, for fear of making a mistake.

Often you refrain from doing things for fear of failure. Then some other person follows along the lines your mind has thought out and success comes to that other person.

But is it not true that you do not like to put up a good stiff fight for anything you want?

You prefer to get what you can, and get it easily, rather than to enter a struggle which would compel sustained mental and physical effort.

This, combined with fear, makes a load-stone which has kept you back.

Successful men often seem happy and carefree, but to reach success they have had a continual fight to maintain each upward step.

They realize that eternal watchfulness keeps what has been gained.

The slightest caving in of mind or demeanor might lose the advantage.

So the successful man stands, as you might stand, if you were willing to brace your back to the wall and fight and keep fighting.

But you like ease, and comfort, and freedom from responsibility above everything else, and so you do not try for a high position.

of methylated benzene compounds are in progress. In the physical institute studies on colors and their differentiation are conducted by Dr. Duschek-Frankfurt. A prehistoric cave discovered in the Styrian Alps near Minitz gave opportunity for the study of animals and plants of diluvial times, while the results of botanical researches in the Far East and in the African Sudan, begun by Austrians before the war, have been published recently.

"All these important contributions to science have been made in spite of an appalling lack of funds, indicating what might be done if the scientific spirit were not subdued."

In a civil action on money matters, the plaintiff had stated that his financial position was always satisfactory. In cross-examination, he was asked if ever he had been bankrupt.

"No," was the answer.

Next question was:

"Now, be careful, did you ever stop payment?"

"No," was the reply.

"Ah," exclaimed the counsel, "I thought we should get at it at last. When did that happen?"

"After I paid all I owed," was the answer.

How The Ancient Egyptians Were Able To Arrange Time

BY GARRETT P. SERVICE

Would you kindly throw some light on how the ancient Egyptians were able to arrange time in the sothic (dog star) cycle of 1,460 years or so? The information possessed by these men of a far-off day seems a bit marvellous. J. F. R. Jolla, Cal. Egypt is full of monuments which show that, in ancient times, the astronomer-priests, (for Egyptian religion was always intimately associated with astronomy) made quite accurate observations of the equinoxes and the solstices, and by fixing the dates of these they were able to measure the length of the solar year in days.

A tall, straight obelisk, erected on a level plane, would enable them to determine, by observing the varying length of its shadow at noon, throughout the year, the moment of the Summer and the Winter solstice—i.e., when the sun was highest and when lowest. A return of the sun to the same solstice would indicate the expiration of a year's time.

There is reason for thinking that great temples had their long axes oriented toward the rising or setting place of the sun at one or the other of the solstices. The religious significance of this would be the influence over the minds of the worshippers produced by seeing an apparently miraculous illumination shining out once a year from the holy-places, in the gloomy depths of the temple's interior, where a brilliant beam from the sun would fall, during only a minute or two, not to reappear for a twelve-month.

The scientific significance would be the determination of the length of the year by the return of the solstitial beam. The fixed axis of the temple pointed steadily to the place on the horizon where the solstitial beam marked the end of one year and the beginning of its successor.

Religious Training Gains

(The Kansas City Times)

The limited attention it is possible to give religious instruction in the hour or half that time in the Sunday-schools one day in the week has been regarded as a problem by religious leaders for several years. It was believed that the subject demanded far more thorough and extensive treatment than had been the rule in the churches. Hence there arose the plan of offering courses of religious study in the week days and frequently at places outside the churches.

He Transplants Hearts

The Vienna correspondent of The Journal of the American Medical Association writes that in a short report to the Government, which demonstrated the meagerness of the regular appropriations to the scientific research institutes, Professors Becke and Rademacher asked for larger appropriations and enumerated the most important investigations conducted last year in this country.

Apart from the publications dealing with the geographic and ethnographic researches in the Balkans in 1915-18, when Austrian armies occupied these countries, the results of which were made known in 1922, one of the most important papers was that by Dr. Schedler, who made geognostic surveys in thirty different places and found marked differences and changes from the values heretofore accepted.

"The Vienna Radium Institute, a private concern, has done excellent work in the investigation of radioactive substances," says the correspondent. "It has been shown that the age of certain mineral deposits can be estimated according to the proportion of transformation or decay of the radioactive substances contained in them. While the uranium-pitchblende of Bohemia is about 200,000,000 years old, in Norway there are minerals at least twice as old, and in Ceylon the layers of thorianite have been found to be at least 500,000,000 years old.

"A tremendous amount of work is still going on in the Biologic Institute (Vienna). Here the problems of transplantation have attracted the attention of a number of gifted investigators. The pupils of Pribram study especially the physiology of transplanted eyes, hearts and legs. Koppányi has succeeded in transplanting eyes in rats, and these eyes seem to be functioning. At a recent meeting of the Vienna Ophthalmologic Society his experiments were vehemently attacked by the oculists, but just as vehemently defended by the physiologists.

"Dr. Weiss transplanted entire limbs in amphibia, exchanging, for instance, arms and legs, and demonstrated that these transplanted limbs functioned normally after a few days. In a group of these animals he could even transplant whole hearts into the peritoneal cavity. These trans-
